The murder for which Joseph Harris suffered the extreme penalty of the law yester day was committed on the 23d of November 880, and was one of the most terrible trage dies in the history of East Tennessee. He was hung for the murder of Charles Brown and Andrew Heck while they were asleep. Charles Brown and family had business at 371 and 373 Main street, in the city of Memphis. Sledge, sr., is a man of Hall, about four miles from Rogersville. large wealth and is a big planter in Mississippi. In 1878 the Memphis firm dissolved owing to bad management. Mr. Fulmer was then bookkeeper, and he remained with the firm to help wind up its affairs. When this was done a proposition was made to his farm for property in Bristol. On the night in question, young Brown and Heck put up at the house of a Mr. Price, a tenant living near the hall. That night Price, hearing a noise in the room where the two men wer eeping, went into it and four
